Dog's Tongue Gets Caught In Paper Shredder

Mixed-Breed Dog Receives 100 Stitches

POSTED: 10:57 am CDT May 29, 2009
UPDATED: 2:32 pm CDT May 29, 2009

MIAMI -- Last week, an 8-year-old mixed-breed named Diamond was rushed to a veterinary clinic in Miami with an alarming injury, local station WPLG reported.

"She had licked a paper shredder in the house that was set on automatic," said Dr. Marc Wosar of the Miami Veterinary Specialists.

The shredder grabbed onto Diamond's tongue and pulled it deeper into the sharp blades.

"I think it's a big potential risk in the house," Dr. Juan Sardinas said.

Fortunately, Diamond's owners were home and responded quickly.

They disconnected the head of the shredder and carried it, with the dog's tongue still stuck inside, to Miami Veterinary Specialists.

"We anesthetized her first, then reversed the shredder off the tongue and assessed the damage," said Wosar. "There were a lot of lacerations to the tongue as well as a lot of bite wounds. In her panic, she'd also bitten her tongue."

It took more than a 100 stitches to repair Diamond's tongue. A portion that was too severely damaged had to be removed, but doctors expect her to make a full recovery.

"She just won't have a perfectly round tongue. She'll have a little nick in it," said Wosar.

Veterinarians recommend confining or crating animals when you're not home to keep them away from anything that might cause harm.
